Gentlemen:

I feel it is both a duty and a pleasure to write and tell you, at this time, a recent experience I had, in which your product, Camel Cigarettes played a major part.

I recently had a severe attack of arthritis, the cause of which was attributed to bad tonsils. My physician and his consultant felt that it was necessary to remove my tonsils in order to assure me absolute relief. As I knew, the operation was both of a serious and painful nature and required extreme patience from me. I spent three feverish days in the hospital under trying observation and on the fourth, despite my temperature, the Doctor felt that it was necessary to operate.

During this period, I smoked an average of a package of Camels daily and found them both soothing to my throat and helpful to my nerves.

Precisely to my operation which took place in the Montefiore Hospital at 12:30 A.M., March 26, and less than six hours later, I was smoking Camels because of the relief ^{that} I felt they afforded me. I feel safe in quoting my operating and attending physician, Dr. S. H. Rotner as having said, "I am very well pleased with the result of your operation." This proves conclusively that my smoking was more beneficial than harmful.

I have been smoking for twenty years but have not as yet, found a cigarette the parallel of Camels in both taste and flavor. They are, to my estimation, a superior cigarette.

Sincerely yours,

A. J. Deana
